This is a scam company pretending to be a payday lender on different websites that turns around and charges people $19.95 and then their sister website www.freedomcs.com charges $49.95 instead of giving the applicant a loan.

Daniel Richardson is preying on poor people that need payday loans and stealing their money.

Just do a search on phoneowner.info for 8778901250 or search www.ripoffreport.com for Uniguard and you will see. on Jan. 12 2010 CBoydAttyThis posting is made by legal counsel in correction and clarification of anonymous and other postings made to this blog by various persons concerning Last Chance Lists ("LCL"), the Uniguard program, and Daniel J. Richardson and his wife. Posts made to this blog pertaining to the Richardsons, LCL and Uniguard are false, inaccurate, misleading, confusing and wholly defamatory and slanderous. LCL did not run a scam. LCL was a reseller of a package called Uniguard Plus. This package was offered by a very reputable company that has been in business for over 50 years selling consumer services. LCL was NOT the marketer of the product. LCL hired a Nevada firm to market the Uniguard package. This company was contracted to offer the Uniguard package through a _bonus pop_ question on various websites through affiliate marketers. The _bonus pop_ allowed consumers to opt in to the Uniguard offer. LCL never authorized the marketing company or any other party or person to market the product on a "payday loan" site. LCL received written confirmation from the marketing company that the Uniguard program was marketed through a _bonus pop_ question and was NOT part of any auto-enrollment program associated with a payday loan.

The Nevada firm was also contracted to handle the customer service for the Uniguard product and was instructed to issue refunds immediately when a consumer cancelled the service. LCL has done everything they can to assure that every consumer who requested a refund did receive one.

LCL learned in late January, 2010, that there were apparently problems with the customer service center. LCL had no knowledge of any issues or complaints prior to this time. LCL believes that the customer service center handled numerous programs and was not properly trained. LCL believes that the customer service center apparently gave consumers incorrect information regarding the Uniguard program and how it was marketed. LCL believes that the customer service center confused consumers and/or led customers to believe that Uniguard was related to other website offers or payday loans, which it was not. LCL acted immediately upon learning of customer complaints and/or refund issues to ensure that all customer received prompt responses and refunds.

LCL did NOT offer any program other than Uniguard. LCL is NOT related to ANY company offering any other website programs and LCL is NOT related to any company offering payday loans. Our client operates a legitimate business and customer service is a priority.

Sincerely,

Cami Boyd, Esq. Cami Boyd Law PLLC 7557 Rambler Road Suite 560 Dallas, Texas 75231 on Jul. 16 2011
